

REFUND AND CANCELLATION POLICY

For projects, subscriptions, digital products, website plans, and marketing packages.

Effective Date: 07/06/2026

1. Scope

This Refund and Cancellation Policy applies to services, subscriptions, digital products, virtual assistants, automation tools, website packages, marketing packages, consulting, and other services purchased from Judo Marketing, unless a separate written agreement states otherwise.

2. General Refund Rule

Because Judo Marketing provides customized digital, creative, technical, consulting, marketing, and subscription-based services, payments are generally non-refundable once work has started, access has been provided, a digital product has been delivered, a strategy session has occurred, a subscription period has started, or resources have been allocated to the project.

- Setup fees are non-refundable.
- Monthly subscription fees are non-refundable after the billing date.
- Completed work, drafts, designs, websites, automations, virtual assistants, consultations, strategy plans, advertising setup, and delivered digital products are non-refundable.
- Third-party fees, advertising spend, software, domains, hosting, stock assets, premium tools, transaction fees, and platform charges are non-refundable.

3. Project Cancellation by Client

The client may request cancellation by emailing admin@judomarketing.net. Cancellation stops future work after the request is processed, but it does not automatically create a refund for work already started, completed, delivered, reserved, scheduled, or billed.

If a custom project is canceled before completion, Judo Marketing may invoice for work performed, time spent, expenses incurred, third-party costs, administrative time, consultation time, and any non-refundable setup or reservation fees.

4. Subscription Cancellation

Subscriptions renew until canceled. A cancellation request prevents future billing after the current paid billing period unless a separate written agreement requires a minimum term or additional notice.

Cancellation requests may be submitted by email to admin@judomarketing.net. The request should include the client name, business name, service plan, and email associated with the account.

If a subscription was purchased online and applicable law requires online cancellation, Judo Marketing will make a reasonable online cancellation method available.

5. Minimum Terms and Website Plans

Some website or digital service plans may require a minimum active subscription period before ownership transfer, including plans where the domain and website become the client's property after the third paid month. If the client cancels before the minimum term is satisfied, Judo Marketing may retain control of the website, domain, files, platform access, and unpaid work unless a buyout or written transfer agreement is completed.

6. Failed Payments and Paused Services

If a payment fails, is reversed, disputed, charged back, or remains unpaid, Judo Marketing may pause work, suspend subscriptions, disable access, remove support, stop advertising management, or delay deliverables until the account is current. Chargebacks for valid services may result in termination and collection of outstanding balances.

7. No Refunds for Results-Based Expectations

Refunds are not provided because a campaign, website, advertisement, digital product, or automation did not produce a specific number of leads, sales, appointments, followers, revenue, approvals, impressions, clicks, or results. Judo Marketing does not guarantee specific business outcomes.

8. Company-Initiated Termination

Judo Marketing may terminate or refuse service for nonpayment, illegal requests, platform violations, abusive conduct, security risks, reputational risks, failure to provide required materials, or requests outside the company's acceptable use standards. If Judo Marketing terminates without client fault before work begins, a refund may be considered for unused prepaid amounts, excluding non-refundable third-party fees and administrative costs.

9. Billing Disputes

Billing questions must be submitted to admin@judomarketing.net as soon as possible. The client agrees to cooperate in good faith before initiating a payment dispute or chargeback.